Backpack

- A backpack is defined as a fabric sack, which is carried on one's back. It is secured with two attached straps that rest over the shoulders.
- There are many different types of backpacks including – book bags, functional bags, professional backpacks, travel bags, urban backpacks, laptop bags, and active backpacks.
 - Each type of backpack possesses a unique function

Boat Neck Top

- A boat neck, also known as a "Sabrina" neckline, is defined as a wide neckline that runs horizontally, front and back, almost to shoulder points, across the collarbone.
- This elegant neckline draws the eye towards your shoulders and gives the illusion of better posture
- The boat neck top can be styled in a variety of ways:
 - Example – Boat-neck slim-fitting top, white or black high-waisted wide leg trousers, heeled boots.

Mule Shoe

- Mules are defined as shoes which do not possess a back or strap that secure the wearer's foot or heel.
- The front of the shoe is covered in a softer material, such as leather or mesh, whereas the back remains open.
- Mules can be found in a variety of heights
 - Some have taller heels whereas others resemble slippers or slides

Window Plaid

- Window plaid is defined as a variation of a plaid pattern which resembles the panes of a window.
- This pattern consists of, both, horizontal and vertical lines that intersect at 90-degree angles to form a grid.

Tennis Bracelet

- A tennis bracelet is defined as an elegant bracelet that consists of a line of diamonds or gemstones joined together by a delicate gold or platinum chain.
- The name "tennis bracelet" came from a very interesting story. A world class professional tennis player, Evert, was in the middle of a highly competitive match. During the match, her diamond bracelet came loose and slipped off her wrist. Evert stopped the game and traced the court looking for the jewels. From then on, people referred to diamond bracelets as "tennis bracelets."
- ("The History of the Tennis Bracelet.").

Breast Pocket

- A breast pocket is defined as a pocket on the front of a shirt or a jacket, which falls over the chest.
- A breast pocket was originally created to hold a man's pocket handkerchief as well as pens or small objects that could not fit in a pants pocket. Aside from this, breast pockets are added to give depth to the shirt and make it more dynamic.

Square Neckline

- A square neckline is defined as a neckline of a shirt or dress which resembles the bottom half of a square.
- According to Vogue “sitting somewhere between Renaissance, cottage core, and Victorian, the square neckline has always been a subtle nod to the past.” The neckline accentuates the collarbone and creates a flattering silhouette that was often seen throughout history. Vogue describes the neckline as “timeless yet trendy, demure but also a bit daring.”

Scalloped Hem

- The scalloped hemming technique is defined as a collection of convex curves, commonly at the edge of a piece of fabric, that resemble the edge of a scallop shell.
- Designer Matilda Goad described a scalloped hem as “a simple motif that adds an abundance of charm, it also has a nostalgic element that really appeals.”
- A scalloped hem is a simple way to add a classic detail to the hem of a dress or blouse.

D-Ring Closure

- A D-Ring closure is defined as a metal ring of various sizes. It is used on clothing or other articles, such as purses or bags as a closure or as a non-functional decoration.

Crystal Pleat

- A crystal pleat is defined as a series of narrow, sharply pressed pleats all turned in one direction.
- Pleating allows the designer to add dimension and texture to the garment.
